Scenario 1
Question 1

Oslo Banking is a large banking organisation which offers a variety of services including loans, mortgages and insurance. The bank is currently undertaking a large advertising campaign. One of the ways it will advertise its services is by using posters.

Karl is the manager of a small branch. He thinks the advertising will be more effective using flyers.

The bank's advertising department allows several of its team to work from home, where they produce advertising ideas. The initial designs are usually just hand drawn sketches. Karl would like to see these initial designs so that he can see the stages of development of the ideas. Workers are encouraged to send these using fax machines which have been purchased for them by the company.

Because of the cold climate it is essential for these workers to have an efficient central heating system.

1 (a) Give four reasons why some advertising staff would rather work in the office than work at home.

Scenario 3
Questions 5, 6

Mrs Sharif is the head teacher of a large school. She has recently decided to upgrade the school's computer system so that all teachers use ICT in their lessons.

In addition, the system will enable student records, including test scores, calculated as percentages, to be stored efficiently.

She has employed Jasvinder Sidhu to develop the new system.

Jasvinder will examine all the existing documents which are used with the current student record system.

He will need to interview Mrs Sharif as well as examine the way the current system works. He will then design the new system before developing it. After the new system has been created it will need to be tested.

When the system has been implemented, Jasvinder will need to produce some program documentation.

5 Describe six benefits of using ICT in the classroom.
