SECTION A: THE CULTURAL DOMAIN

Answer ALL parts of the question in this section concerning the growth of blogging.

SOURCE 1

BLOGGING: THE NEW JOURNALISM?

They are opinionated, ranting, often incoherent and frequently biased with little regard for accuracy or balance. They are also compellingly addictive and threatening to emerge as a new brand of journalism. Web logging, or blogging, is the new kid on the media block, complete with its own, unique lexicon. A blog is simply a series of updated posts on a web page in the form of a diary or journal often including commentary on, and hypertext links to, other web sites. Posts are in chronological order and can contain anything from simple text, to music, images and even streamed video. Perhaps one attraction of blogging lies in its unmediated and dynamic quality. Without an agenda, editorial stance or pedantic sub-editor standing between the writer and reader, blogging can provide reportage in a raw and exciting form.

Unlike the large media organisations, bloggers are unhindered by the normal journalistic standards of objectivity, balance and accuracy. This amateur output is raw, subjective and honest as people seek emotions, not detachment – finding solace and expression in the words of the thousands of blogs that spring up. But while some bloggers believe that a new brand of journalism is emerging, some new media pundits remain sceptical.

Lloyd Shepherd, chief producer for Guardian Unlimited, says: “Blogging is not structured in the way journalism is. People are putting their views out in a relatively unprocessed manner. The question is why so many readers of online content have chosen to eschew traditional sources of news in favour of weblogs. Looking at the content blogs provide, such as alternative perspective, first-person experiences and interactivity, one might conclude that readers want either a less balanced or more personal angle to their news. At the heart of this may also be a growing dissatisfaction or distrust of news provided by large media conglomerates.”

SECTION B: THE CULTURAL DOMAIN

Answer ONE question from this section.
Answers must be in continuous prose.

- 2 People often talk about trusting their instincts. Outline and discuss ONE positive and ONE negative outcome of people trusting their instincts in everyday life. [30]

- 3 In an age where the press is dominated by a small number of national newspapers, outline and discuss why regional and local newspapers should continue being published. You may use your own local newspaper as an example. [30]

- 4 Art is constantly changing. Choose ONE art form with which you are familiar. Use TWO examples to illustrate the ways in which this art form has changed over a period of time. Discuss possible reasons for the changes you have described. [30]

Section B Total [30]

SECTION C: THE SOCIAL DOMAIN

Answer ALL parts of the question in this section concerning influences on human behaviour.

- 5 SOURCES 2 AND 3, (on separate Insert), represent two different environments where people live and work.
- (a) By making comparisons, outline THREE main differences between these environments. [10]
 - (b) For EACH of the sources outline ONE way in which an interpretation based on what can be seen in the photographs can be misleading. [4]
 - (c) Outline TWO ways in which you believe the area you live in can have an effect upon your lifestyle. [6]
 - (d) If ‘home is where the heart is’, why do so many people leave the place of their birth, never to return? [10]

Section C Total [30]

SECTION D: THE SOCIAL DOMAIN

Answer ONE question from this section.
Answers must be in continuous prose.

- 6 Outline TWO of the roles performed by local government. For EACH of these, identify a reason why local government may be criticised for the way it performs this role. In EACH case, suggest a solution to the problem. [30]

- 7 Choose ONE of the primary emergency services (police, fire or ambulance). Examine TWO public criticisms of the service you have chosen. Offer a solution for each of the problems you have examined. [30]

- 8 Sport often results in controversy, tension and discord. With reference to examples from TWO different sports, examine ways in which such problems occur. Suggest ways in which they might be dealt with by the authorities governing the sports. [30]
