Answer three questions.

- 1 Michael has stolen £17000-worth of computer equipment from his employer. His girlfriend, Jane, has sold the items on the Internet. They have spent the money obtained on a new car and a holiday. Michael pleads guilty to theft and Jane to handling stolen goods at their first appearance before the Magistrates' Court.

What options are open to the magistrates in sentencing them?

What principles will be considered by the court in arriving at a sentence? [25]

- 2 In R v Shivpuri (1987), the House of Lords overruled its earlier decision in Anderton v Ryan (1985). Consider critically the way in which the system of precedent operates in English law and the possibility of overturning a decision which is outdated or unfair. [25]

- 3 PC Biswas suspects that Pete, who is 16, is carrying drugs. He stops him in the street and tells him to remove his shirt and socks. When the officer discovers a small package of cannabis hidden inside Pete's left sock, he takes him to the police station. Pete is interviewed alone. PC Biswas tells him: 'You don't need a solicitor; they'll sort it all out at court.' Pete is then kept in custody, to appear before the Youth Court the next day.

To what extent would you say that the powers of the police under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act (1984) have been properly exercised here? [25]

- 4 Critically evaluate the arguments for and against the use of the jury in civil and criminal proceedings. [25]

- 5 'His Lordship found Section 2 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 2004 ill-drafted but not ambiguous. Nor did the interpretation he would give to it produce an absurdity.'
Thet v Director of Public Prosecutions (2006)

Discuss critically the options open to a judge where difficulties arise in the interpretation of a statute. [25]

- 6 On 1st July 2007, the Health Act 2006 came into force, forbidding smoking in enclosed public spaces. The Smoke-free (Signs) Regulations 2007 took effect from the same date, in the form of a statutory instrument giving details of how and where 'No Smoking' signs must be displayed.

Discuss the relationship, if any, between statutes and delegated legislation, giving examples of when delegated legislation arises and of the controls which can be exercised over it. [25]
