

SPANISH

Paper 9719/01
Speaking

Key messages

This component is made up of three sections and to perform well candidates need to:

- make a formal presentation of a topic clearly related to a Hispanic context
- take part in a discussion of issues arising from the presentation
- discuss issues of a more general nature at an appropriate level.

The use of Spanish should be generally accurate and of a suitably advanced nature and should demonstrate good use of idiom and appropriate vocabulary. Interaction with the examiner is an important criterion in the conversations. Candidates must ensure that they ask questions of the Examiner in both the Topic and General conversation sections in order to access the marks available for Seeking Information and Opinions.

General comments

Most Centres conducted the tests in full accordance with the requirements of the syllabus, which ensured that candidates had the opportunity to perform to the best of their ability, and which helped the moderation process to run smoothly.

The majority of Centres recorded the tests onto CDs, with a good sound quality. However, Examiners are reminded that they must announce the Centre number and the candidate's name and number at the start of each test. Please save each test to a separate track or file.

It is important that the Working Mark Sheet is fully completed for all candidates – including those whose test is not submitted as part of the sample – and enclosed with the recordings. There were still a few Centres that omitted to complete all the appropriate columns, or that just gave overall totals for sections. We remind all Centres that their marks cannot be confirmed or moderated unless the full breakdown of marks is shown.

Centres are also reminded that the Moderator's copy of the MS1 Internal Assessment Mark Sheet (or a signed printout of the marks file if marks are submitted electronically) must also be enclosed with the moderation materials.

Although not widespread, there were still some Centres that did not make a clear distinction between the Topic and General conversations sections. These must be separate sections, with the start and end clearly indicated to enable Moderators to see how the marks were awarded across each section. In some tests, the Topic conversation ran on to the end of the test, repeating issues already discussed, perhaps in a wider context, but nevertheless not allowing the candidate to respond to a sufficiently wide range of topics. Marks cannot be awarded for a General conversation if there is no clear evidence that it has been conducted.

Please remember the prescribed timings: Presentations should not exceed three and a half minutes; the Topic conversation section should not exceed eight minutes and the General conversation section should last no longer than nine minutes. Candidates cannot receive extra credit for tests that go beyond the time limit.

Comments on specific sections

Section 1: Presentation

General topic areas are outlined in the syllabus and topics must relate clearly to aspects of Hispanic life or culture. It is important to make this relevance explicit in the Presentation. Although some themes may have a general application, for example, the environment, technology, etc., candidates need to show how the topic has particular application in a Hispanic context. The 'Content and Presentation' mark out of ten is halved if no specific Hispanic focus is included.

Presentations should be a formal and coherent introduction to the subject and ideally provide a lead in to the Topic conversation by perhaps giving a personal viewpoint to indicate items for debate. The Presentation should show evidence of preparation and organisation and contain relevant factual knowledge. Pronunciation and quality of delivery are also taken into account. Candidates who recited an over-learned script in a monotone, with little attempt to engage the listener, lost some credit here.

Section 2: Topic Conversation

In this part of the test candidates should discuss and develop points arising from their Presentation; it should not just be an invitation to the candidate to give a further series of mini presentations. Interaction is important and Examiners should encourage the candidate to justify an opinion, or refute a differing point of view. Candidates whose responses were confined to pre-learned answers, with little evidence of spontaneity, could not be awarded high marks for 'Comprehension and Responsiveness'. Discussion should relate as far as possible to the Hispanic context.

In both the Topic and General conversation sections, candidates should ask the Examiner questions in order to seek information and opinions. If necessary Examiners should remind candidates to ask such questions, and should take care not to give lengthy responses which reduce the amount of time available to the candidate to demonstrate his/her skills. Marks cannot be awarded for 'Seeking Information and Opinions' if no questions are asked by the candidate.

Section 3: General Conversation

This must be a separate section from the Topic conversation and different issues should be discussed. Although there are no prescribed topic areas for the General conversation, those that are discussed should be at an appropriate level of demand. Common areas included current affairs, a news item, the arts, sport, the environment, the economy, politics – almost anything likely to spark a discussion according to the candidate's interests.

There were still some cases of questioning at a level more appropriate to IGCSE or Ordinary Level. Although some basic, personal or factual questions may be useful to start a discussion, candidates must be given the opportunity to show they can give and justify opinions of more advanced issues, as well as having sufficient general knowledge to substantiate a point. All conversations should go beyond the descriptive.

As in the Topic Conversation, candidates should ask the Examiner questions in order to seek information and opinions and should be reminded to do so if necessary.

Language

Range and accuracy of language are assessed in both Conversation sections. Examiners are again reminded to encourage candidates to use as wide a range of language as possible, both in terms of vocabulary and structure. To gain access to the higher ranges of the mark scheme, candidates should show competence in dealing with hypothetical and abstract situations as well as factual or descriptive areas. Accuracy tended to be more shaky in some basic structures, including verb endings and tenses, or noun / adjective / verb agreements.

Resources

A selection of Example Candidate Responses together with revised and updated Schemes of Work are now available to download from the Teacher Support website <http://teachers.cie.org.uk>.

SPANISH

---

Paper 9719/21
Reading and Writing

Key message

In order to access every mark on this paper, candidates should follow the instructions in the rubrics carefully, avoid lifting five or more words from the text to answer comprehension questions, keep to the word limit in Question 5, and make sure that they attempt an answer to every question.

General comments

All scripts were generally well presented, and response to the two texts, dealing with different approaches to resolving economic difficulties, was often good. There was little evidence of any difficulty with time management.

Comments on specific questions

SECCIÓN PRIMERA

Question 1

The majority of candidates were aware of the technique required to answer this question, although there were some who thought it was necessary to copy out the whole sentence which contained the targeted phrase, and a few who treated this as an exercise in paraphrasing.

It is important to answer with a phrase from the text which is a precise match to that of the question, and careful cross-checking should ensure that no additional words are included either before or after the matched phrase. Any such additions invalidate otherwise correct answers. A good way to check at a glance that an answer contains no extras or omissions is to copy out the paraphrase in the question and then write the answer phrase on the line beneath. Often, although not always, the targeted phrase is of a similar length to the one in the question.

The answers which most often contained unnecessary additions were:

- (a) – answers continued with ...un sistema.
- (c) – answers continued with ...para.

A common incorrect answer for (e) was favorecer los valores de cooperación, or occasionally the answer for (d) was offered here instead.

Question 2

This usually proves to be one of the more demanding exercises on the paper. In addition to performing the language manipulations required in this question, it is important to check that the answers fit back into the original text and retain the same meaning. The technique mentioned above of copying out the phrase as it appears on the question paper before writing the answer underneath can help to ensure that this is the case. It should also be possible to tell at a glance whether in making the manipulation any elements have been added or omitted.

- (a) Common errors included the omission of de or the retention of the negative no carece fondos.

- (b) This was generally well done, with the majority of candidates being aware that siempre que is followed by the subjunctive.
- (c) Candidates who realised that buscada was a past participle and not an alternative to búsqueda usually completed the manipulation successfully.
- (d) Many candidates came close to answering correctly, but omitted to change estar to the subjunctive form estén.
- (e) There were many different ways of performing a manipulation to give a correct answer. There was widespread awareness that tanto needed to be paired with como.

Question 3

Comprehension of the text was generally good, and candidates who gave clear, detailed answers in their own words were able to access the higher mark ranges. Candidates who correctly identified the points which were being tested but who answered in brief phrases, or had difficulties in producing a successful paraphrase, were credited for content where appropriate – provided that fewer than five words of text had been copied – but were unable to access the full range of marks available for Quality of Language.

- (a) Most candidates scored two marks for noting that items or services to be exchanged should be comparable in value and that the two parties should trust one another. A few answered incorrectly that no money being exchanged was another necessary factor.
- (b) Good answers made it abundantly clear which services each company was either acquiring or offering. Examiners were unable to award marks when answers talked generally about the exchange of services being of mutual benefit to both companies without giving specific details. The fact that no money changed hands was sometimes omitted.
- (c) (i) Candidates who had not fully grasped the meaning of the word banco in this context were sometimes further confused by the references to euros and moneda de cambio. There were several instances of copying five or more words from the text.
(ii) The second part of the question proved to be more accessible and there were four different routes to the three marks. The requirements for using a banco de tiempo were fairly readily identified, although the idea of en la localidad del banco tended to be either omitted or it was copied without any attempt to paraphrase. The expression impreso de adhesión sometimes gave rise to anglicisms such as aplicación and forma.
- (d) It was quite common for only one of the two available marks to be scored here. The point about equal job value was often confused with the importance of the time factor, and the second point regarding helping others was missed possibly because of difficulty with the word gratificante.
- (e) There was a similar tendency here for one mark to be scored rather than two. The notion of promoting cooperation amongst citizens was frequently put forward as a response.

SECCIÓN SEGUNDA

Question 4

Candidates seemed to find the second text, dealing with the rise in popularity in the use of pawnbrokers' shops, more challenging than the first.

- (a) Many candidates were able to readily identify the three points in the text and there were some successful attempts at producing appropriate verb forms for encarecimiento and restricción. Several candidates sometimes copied key phrases directly from the text which meant that marks could not be awarded.
- (b) (i) One out of two was a common score here. The first mark was sometimes not awarded because candidates did not mention the fact that the immigrants were impoverished. The phrase la crisis económica está afectando a la economía real caused some difficulties in comprehension.

- (ii) Candidates who were able to distinguish clearly between the ways in which tiendas de compraventa were used in the past and now in the present day scored the two marks.
- (c) This was a reasonably straightforward question but not many candidates were able to score maximum marks. It was a four-mark question, indicating that four distinct points were being sought. To score the first mark candidates needed to clarify that Josefina was now only able to take on one domestic employee. Most candidates were able to note that she now had to rent out some of her rooms. One of the last two points about how she spent the money acquired by pawning her jewels was often omitted, or the phrase materiales para la nueva temporada was commonly copied without any attempt to paraphrase.
- (d) Many candidates answered by mentioning the interest rates referred to in the early part of the paragraph and were therefore unable to score a mark.
- (e) Again, candidates appeared to be distracted by parts of the paragraph which were irrelevant to the question asked, despite the fact that the word imagen appeared in both the question and the relevant part of the text. Marks were often scored for paraphrasing that pawnbrokers' shops no son muy similares a los bancos, although the force of the double negative was sometimes missed. The concept están a la vista de todos, if correctly identified and understood, often proved difficult to express.

Question 5

Good examination technique is extremely important in this question and can often make a significant difference to the marks awarded. Most candidates seemed to be aware of the need to keep to the limit of 140 words for both parts of the question. Anything in excess of 160 words is disregarded, and in extreme cases this can lead to no marks being awarded for the second part.

- (a) The technique required for achieving a good mark in this task is to note, in the very limited number of words available, details from the texts which answer the question which has been asked. Generalisations, often required by other forms of summary writing, are usually too vague to score. Each relevant specific detail corresponds to one mark. Generalised introductions, such as Actualmente vivimos en un mundo capitalista, el cual es un tanto ambicioso y egoísta. Así que las personas tienen la necesidad de creer en la esperanza y que aún hay solución para sus problemas..., waste words and score nothing for content. Candidates who applied the required technique scored well, and the question was a good test of overall understanding of the two texts. Sometimes the distinction between the bancos de tiempo and tiendas de compraventa became blurred, and statements were made about both which, in fact, applied only to one or the other. Nevertheless, a good number of candidates were able to note the main points and produced a summary and explanation that read very well.
- (b) The personal response was generally done well. In the two or three sentences which are usually available for this task any ideas that are different from those expressed in the texts, combined with a personal opinion, will usually score highly. The vast majority of candidates confirmed that the economic crisis is, indeed, worldwide, and many included personal details of how family or friends had been affected.

The quality of candidates' written Spanish, both here and throughout the paper, was generally up to the standard required by this examination, with the marks falling between the Sound and Very Good range.

Resources

A selection of Example Candidate Responses together with revised and updated Schemes of Work are now available to download from the Teacher Support website <http://teachers.cie.org.uk>.

SPANISH

---

Paper 9719/22
Reading and Writing

Key message

In order to access every mark on this paper, candidates should follow the instructions in the rubrics carefully, avoid lifting five or more words from the text to answer comprehension questions, keep to the word limit in Question 5, and make sure that they attempt an answer to every question.

General comments

All scripts were generally well presented, and response to the two texts, dealing with the related topics of renewable energy and sustainable transport, was often good. There was little evidence of any difficulty with time management.

Comments on specific questions

SECCIÓN PRIMERA

Question 1

The majority of candidates were aware of the technique required to answer this question, although there were some who thought it was necessary to copy out the whole sentence which contained the targeted phrase, and a few who treated this as an exercise in paraphrasing.

It is important to answer with a phrase from the text which is a precise match to that of the question, and careful cross-checking should ensure that no additional words are included either before or after the matched phrase. Any such additions invalidate otherwise correct answers. A good way to check at a glance that an answer contains no extras or omissions is to copy out the paraphrase in the question and then write the answer phrase on the line beneath. Often, although not always, (e.g. Question 1(c)), the targeted phrase is of a similar length to the one in the question.

The most likely answers to contain unnecessary additions were:

- (b) – answers continued with ...de panel solar.
(c) – answers continued with ...de energía.

Otherwise correct answers in (c) were sometimes invalidated by the omission of para at the start of the phrase.

Question 2

This usually proves to be one of the more demanding exercises on the paper. In addition to performing the language manipulations required in this question, it is important to check that the answers fit back into the original text and retain the same meaning. The technique mentioned above of copying out the phrase as it appears on the question paper before writing the answer underneath can help to ensure that this is the case. It should also be possible to tell at a glance whether in making the manipulation any elements have been added or omitted.

- (a) The conversion from the passive present continuous to the active form was successfully achieved by most candidates.

- (b) The use of llevar + present participle in temporal expressions was recognised by some candidates, and several different permutations of the structure were used. Others appeared less familiar with the structure.
- (c) Many candidates recognised that the conditional, sería suficiente, was needed here.
- (d) Many realised that poder would be required in the answer but not so many put this into the conditional form, and only a minority were successful in using the impersonal se podría comparar.
- (e) There were many different ways of performing a manipulation to give a correct answer. Most candidates correctly opted for a subjunctive construction but some did not offer the necessary plural capturen.

Question 3

Comprehension of the text was generally good, and candidates who gave clear, detailed answers in their own words were able to access the higher mark ranges. Candidates who correctly identified the points which were being tested but who answered in brief phrases, or had difficulties in producing a successful paraphrase, were credited for content where appropriate – provided that fewer than five words of text had been copied – but were unable to access the full range of marks available for Quality of Language.

- (a) Most candidates scored two marks for noting that the solar panels could change the way in which we travel and obtain energy. The expression aprovechamos la infraestructura de red de carreteras was not well understood.
- (b) Marks for identifying the high costs of the project and lack of advanced technology were commonly awarded. Only a few candidates added that an insufficient amount of asphalted road surface was also a barrier to the implementation of the project.
- (c) Most candidates readily identified the facts which were required to answer this question, and those who were able to express them clearly scored maximum marks. Most difficulty was encountered in stating that the ‘solar highways’ would have similar construction costs to conventional roads.
- (d) The marks in brackets at the end of each question give a clear indication as to how many points are being sought in the answer. This was a four-mark question and four distinct points were needed to score the maximum. The four separate advantages of the ‘intelligent roads’, although often successfully identified, proved less easy to paraphrase without copying five or more words of text. Some answers carelessly indicated that las nuevas carreteras generarán energía para 500 casas.
- (e) Many candidates scored two marks here, although some copied the entire phrase hasta 17 000 horas de luz al año which meant that they missed out on one of the available marks.

SECCIÓN SEGUNDA

Question 4

There was possibly greater familiarity with the topic in this text on sustainable transport and marks were on average higher than those for the previous exercise.

- (a) Nearly all candidates mentioned the fact that transport is a major contributor to global warming, and many were able to paraphrase the details relating to greenhouse gases and increases in CO<sub>2</sub> emissions. Occasionally marks were lost when vague over-generalisations were offered for the very specific data contained in the paragraph.
- (b) Raising public awareness of the importance of sustainable transport, improving air quality in the cities and counteracting climate change were all commonly identified. Marks were occasionally lost when, perhaps more by oversight than intention, the phrases la importancia de la movilidad sostenible and mejorar la calidad del aire were copied directly from the text.
- (c) The question and the relevant parts of the text were clearly understood, with the result that many candidates scored the two marks available. The copied phrase cooperación de todos los ciudadanos occasionally invalidated an otherwise correct answer.

- (d) This was another four-mark question, indicating that four distinct points were being sought. Comprehension was generally good. The phrase el sistema de transporte público was occasionally copied directly from the text and marks were sometimes lost by stating that public transport should be used rather than it should be improved.
- (e) The best responses successfully noted that to ride a bicycle in traffic was perceived to be dangerous in Spain, and also mentioned the cultural barriers to this practice without copying the phrase la bicicleta esté mal vista. Most candidates were able to state that it was uncommon to see VIPs on bicycles in Spain.

Question 5

Good examination technique is extremely important in this question and can often make a significant difference to the marks awarded. Most candidates seemed to be aware of the need to keep to the limit of 140 words for both parts of the question. Anything in excess of 160 words is disregarded, and in extreme cases this can lead to no marks being awarded for the second part.

- (a) The technique required for achieving a good mark in this task is to note, in the very limited number of words available, details from the texts which answer the question which has been asked. Generalisations, often required by other forms of summary writing, are usually too vague to score. Each relevant specific detail corresponds to one mark. Introductions, such as Ambos textos tienen como finalidad proporcionar medidas para crear un mundo más verde y ecológico para equiparar todo el daño causado waste words and score nothing for content. It should also be noted that marks are not awarded for personal opinion here. As environmental issues are clearly very familiar subject matter, a few candidates added information and opinions which did not feature in the texts and therefore could not be credited. Despite a noticeable tendency to focus more on details from the second text, candidates who employed the required technique scored well.
- (b) The personal response was generally done well, and most candidates were of the opinion that the car is a problem where they live. In the two or three sentences which are usually available for this task any ideas that are different from those expressed in the texts, combined with a personal opinion, will usually score highly.

The quality of candidates' written Spanish, both here and throughout the paper, was generally up to the standard required by this examination, with the marks falling between the Sound and Very Good range.

Resources

A selection of Example Candidate Responses together with revised and updated Schemes of Work are now available to download from the Teacher Support website <http://teachers.cie.org.uk>.

SPANISH

---

Paper 9719/31
Essay

Key messages

In order to perform well in this paper, candidates should select the title with which they feel most comfortable and write a response that is clearly relevant, well illustrated, coherently structured and well informed. The use of Spanish should be generally accurate and of a suitably advanced nature, as well as showing a good use of idiom and appropriate, topic-related vocabulary. Sentence patterns should show some evidence of complexity and the style should be easy to follow.

General comments

The relevance of the essays written in response to the titles set was clearly a top priority for the overwhelming number of candidates. This session there were far fewer examples of candidates writing pre-learnt essays that did not respond to the actual title set. Understanding the importance of giving a personal response to the chosen title, and not just thinking aloud about the general topic from which the title comes, is something which has improved considerably over recent sessions.

The overall quality of Spanish used by many candidates was good. The majority of essays showed a confident use of complex sentence patterns coupled with an extensive range of vocabulary appropriate to the topic being discussed. The amount of grammatical control in evidence was impressive and many candidates were able to produce essays that showed an unequivocal and in-depth understanding of the topic under discussion.

Some candidates, however, did indeed lose marks for writing an essay which was hugely in excess of the maximum of 400 words permitted by the rubric. Such essays tend to be structurally careless and also result in fewer marks being awarded for linguistic accuracy, given that the longer the essay goes on, the more likelihood there is of grammatical errors being made. Centres are encouraged to advise their candidates to write within the required word length of 250 – 400 words.

In linguistic terms, the main problems noted by Examiners were similar to those seen in previous sessions. Once again, many essays omitted accents and a lack of understanding of the rules governing accentuation in Spanish will lead to a loss of marks in the Language element of the mark scheme. Equally, the use of singular verbs for plural subjects in statements such as ... los medios de comunicación es muy importante... and ...existe muchos comerciales..., the lack of adjectival agreement in phrases such as ...esos anuncios televisivo..., the misspelling of key words, for example, la responsabilidad, frecuentemente and la necesidad, together with el desarrollo, el problem, jovene and la naturalesa also had an effect on the mark awarded for Language. Other common errors were the omission of the letter 'h' in the auxiliary verb used in the perfect tense (...a decidido que...), the substitution of 's' for 'c' in words like ambición and the use of 'c' for 'z', especially in words such as globalización.

With regard to the five essay titles on offer, candidates were able to deal with the issues under the spotlight with sound knowledge and an ability to develop arguments and, rather importantly, draw sensible conclusions. There was some evidence amongst the weaker responses of a more limited capacity to argue a particular case, but on the whole ideas were debated with maturity and intelligence. Most candidates took the decision to tackle the issues from a variety of different approaches. The stronger responses addressed the chosen title in depth and showed good levels of analysis.

Comments on specific questions

Question 1

El trabajo voluntario es una pérdida de tiempo. ¿Estás de acuerdo?

This was a popular title, possibly because candidates felt that they could relate to it using personal experience of voluntary work. Good answers were characterised by a variety of points stating not just how important voluntary work was but also stating that, although there was no actual remuneration, the work brought emotional rewards and gave the opportunity for positive social interaction.

Question 2

La televisión es una fuerza negativa en la sociedad moderna.

This title was generally well answered. The best responses provided a variety of reasons as to why television was a bad influence. The reason most often referred to was its potential for encouraging, amongst other things, ‘copycat’ violence on the streets.

Question 3

Hoy en día, la conservación no es tan importante como el progreso. ¿Qué opinas tú?

This was a hugely popular title. The majority of candidates resisted the temptation to write out a pre-prepared essay on the many types of pollution without referring specifically to the title. The very best essays pointed out that conservation and progress were linked and went on to analyse how they were mutually dependent.

Question 4

Con respecto a la enseñanza, el papel de los padres es mucho más importante que el de los profesores.

This was a generally well answered essay title. Some candidates strayed into irrelevant territory and wrote mainly about what was involved in applying for a job or went on at length about how good (or bad) some of their own teachers have been over the years. The best essays, however, used a balanced approach and explained ways in which parents and teachers needed to work together with both providing different aspects of a child’s upbringing and education.

Question 5

La cultura es una parte fundamental de la identidad nacional de cualquier país. ¿Estás de acuerdo?

This was the least popular title on the paper. Nevertheless, those candidates who responded managed to produce essays that were balanced and well-illustrated, listing the aspects of what constitutes culture and why it is so important in modern society.

Resources

A selection of Example Candidate Responses together with revised and updated Schemes of Work are now available to download from the Teacher Support website <http://teachers.cie.org.uk>.

SPANISH

---

Paper 9719/32

Essay

Key messages

In order to perform well in this paper, candidates should select the title with which they feel most comfortable and write a response that is clearly relevant, well illustrated, coherently structured and well informed. The use of Spanish should be generally accurate and of a suitably advanced nature, as well as showing a good use of idiom and appropriate, topic-related vocabulary. Sentence patterns should show some evidence of complexity and the style should be easy to follow.

General comments

The relevance of the essays written in response to the titles set was clearly a top priority for the overwhelming number of candidates. This session there were far fewer examples of candidates writing pre-learnt essays that did not respond to the actual title set. Understanding the importance of giving a personal response to the chosen title, and not just thinking aloud about the general topic from which the title comes, is something which has improved considerably over recent sessions.

The overall quality of Spanish used by many candidates was good. The majority of essays showed a confident use of complex sentence patterns coupled with an extensive range of vocabulary appropriate to the topic being discussed. The amount of grammatical control in evidence was impressive and many candidates were able to produce essays that showed an unequivocal and in-depth understanding of the topic under discussion.

Some candidates, however, did indeed lose marks for writing an essay which was hugely in excess of the maximum of 400 words permitted by the rubric. Such essays tend to be structurally careless and also result in fewer marks being awarded for linguistic accuracy, given that the longer the essay goes on, the more likelihood there is of grammatical errors being made. Centres are encouraged to advise their candidates to write within the required word length of 250 – 400 words.

In linguistic terms, the main problems noted by Examiners were similar to those seen in previous sessions. Once again, many essays omitted accents and a lack of understanding of the rules governing accentuation in Spanish will lead to a loss of marks in the Language element of the mark scheme. Equally, the use of singular verbs for plural subjects in statements such as ... los medios de comunicación es muy importante... and ...existe muchos comerciales..., the lack of adjectival agreement in phrases such as ...esos anuncios televisivo..., the misspelling of key words, for example, la responsabilidad, frecuentemente and la necesidad, together with el desarrollo, el problem, jovene and la naturalesa also had an effect on the mark awarded for Language. Other common errors were the omission of the letter 'h' in the auxiliary verb used in the perfect tense (...a decidido que...), the substitution of 's' for 'c' in words like ambición and the use of 'c' for 'z', especially in words such as globalización.

With regard to the five essay titles on offer, candidates were able to deal with the issues under the spotlight with sound knowledge and an ability to develop arguments and, rather importantly, draw sensible conclusions. There was some evidence amongst the weaker responses of a more limited capacity to argue a particular case, but on the whole ideas were debated with maturity and intelligence. Most candidates took the decision to tackle the issues from a variety of different approaches. The stronger responses addressed the chosen title in depth and showed good levels of analysis.

Comments on specific questions

Question 1

Trabajar es tan estresante como estar desempleado.

This was generally well answered, with a variety of approaches detailing the advantages of employment, while at the same time pointing out the stress sometimes caused by the working environment. The best essays also examined the economic and social pressures of unemployment with many highlighting the current economic climate. The inevitable stigma of being labelled as unemployed was also mentioned as was the belief that being in work can often, in itself, bring a degree of pressure on family life and relationships in general.

Question 2

¿Es verdad decir que la influencia de la publicidad televisiva es enorme?

This was the most popular title on the paper. There was little doubt amongst candidates that the statement in the title was indeed true. Most essays mentioned the impact that television advertising can have on young people and how fashions and trends can be initiated by the relentless promotion of items such as skin products or fast food. Some candidates missed the word publicidad in the title and wrote merely about television programmes they liked or disliked. Such essays could not gain access to the higher mark bands for Content.

Question 3

A pesar de todo lo que hacemos los humanos para conserver la naturaleza, logramos muy poco.
¿Qué opinas tú?

This was the second most popular title. Candidates argued that the environment can and should be respected more by humans and that we should continue to do all we can to improve recycling rates and reduce air pollution through increased use of public transport. Basically, all agreed that every little helps. Some candidates resorted to listing different types of pollution without relating their words to the title. The best answers were balanced, pointing out with concrete examples what had already been done to counteract pollution of the environment.

Question 4

¿Prepara la enseñanza a los jóvenes para el mundo del trabajo?

Some of the essays produced in response to this title were of a very high quality indeed. Points made were backed up by specific references and it was often suggested that preparing for the world of work involved far more than just acquiring qualifications.

Question 5

Cada gobierno debe asumir la responsabilidad de proteger y fomentar el patrimonio artístico de la nación. ¿Estás de acuerdo?

A generally well answered question and all candidates agreed that governments should indeed assume such a responsibility towards artistic heritage.

Resources

A selection of Example Candidate Responses together with revised and updated Schemes of Work are now available to download from the Teacher Support website <http://teachers.cie.org.uk>.

SPANISH

---

Paper 9719/41

Texts

Key messages

- Candidates should study the stylistic and thematic qualities of the text and not simply the storyline.
- Candidates must read the question carefully and respond to all aspects of their chosen question.
- Each answer must include specific references to the text, which are directly relevant to the question asked.
- References to the text must be correct, for example names of characters.
- Any background to the text must be accurate, for example the date the text was written.
- Option (a) questions in Sección Primera require more extensive treatment in part (iii), where candidates are expected to refer in detail to the work as a whole, not simply the printed extract.
- Candidates need to focus on essay-writing skills. It is expected that they can write an answer with a clear introduction and conclusion, and that the discussion includes relevant detailed material.

General comments

Examiners commented that the general standard of work was good; candidates had studied the texts carefully and presented answers legibly. However, greater focus on the question set and improved essay-writing skills would benefit a large number of candidates.

In some cases candidates did not clearly indicate which question they had chosen to answer and Centres are requested to remind candidates to write the question number, e.g. '2(b)', before they start their essay.

Comments on specific questions

Sección Primera

Question 1 Ernesto Sábato: El túnel

In option (a), candidates dealt well with parts (i) and (ii). Part (iii) tended to be discussed in a more cursory manner with limited discussion of the link between Castel's need for a mother and for María.

In option (b), candidates were given some scope in interpretation of the "obsesiones". There is much material to support the fundamental need to be accepted/loved/recognised as an individual.

Question 2 Pedro Calderón de la Barca: El alcalde de Zalamea

Candidates found option (a) straightforward and were able to give a detailed analysis of don Lope's role in the play.

Option (b) was chosen by very few candidates.

Question 3 Luis Sepúlveda: Un viejo que leía novelas de amor

Answers to option (a) were generally good. Candidates were able to respond to parts (i) and (ii) succinctly and gave balanced analysis in part (iii). The essays included many detailed references and understanding of the underlying themes of the novel.

Option (b) attracted few answers, but candidates appreciated the author's purpose in the way the novel ends and were able to discuss how it informed a reading of the text.

Question 4 Lauro Olmo: La camisa

Option (a) gave rise to some lively responses. Candidates understood the role of señor Paco in the play and were able to give detailed examples of his dubious character. The best essays also analysed his exploitation of the men and examined his role in a wider political context.

Option (b) attracted very few answers, which focused on how poverty extends beyond the purely physical to sap the human spirit.

Sección Segunda

Question 5 Carmen Laforet: Nada

- (a) This question did not attract a large number of responses. The best answers went beyond the experiences of Andrea, to include analysis of the way other members of the family were affected and how they reacted.
- (b) Candidates were able to discuss Ena's role in the novel in some detail. She was generally seen as pivotal in helping Andrea adapt to and begin to understand her new life.

Question 6 Laura Esquivel: Como agua para chocolate

Almost all candidates chose to answer on this text.

- (a) Most candidates found both positive and negative aspects in the presentation of love in the novel. The experience of many characters – Tita, Pedro, Mamá Elena, Gertrudis and Dr Brown – was analysed. Candidates showed understanding and very detailed knowledge.
- (b) Answers focused primarily on Tita and her misfortunes. The best essays included references to the suffering of many others such as Mamá Elena, Nacha and Rosaura. Gertrudis was generally seen as a rebel who attained happiness and freedom on her own terms.

Question 7 Federico García Lorca: Yerma

All candidates answered on this text.

- (a) Candidates tended to focus on Yerma herself, showing how the pressures of society conspired to stifle her. Some answers dealt with Juan and Víctor also, seeing them as victims of 'lo que dirán' too. There were some more sophisticated arguments that considered the nature of repression in a wider sense and discussed the author's intentions in the play.
- (b) This was a popular choice. Candidates produced good answers supporting both alternatives in the question. The best essays compared and contrasted the options. Weaker responses suggested that Yerma was liberated by Juan's death and was now free to marry Víctor. This reaction points to a particular way of reading the text, seeing it as more of a representation of reality than a work of literature with more complex and possibly contradictory messages.

Question 8 Alfonsina Storni: Selección de poemas

There were few responses on this text.

- (a) The choice of poems was critical to the success of the answer. Candidates who chose carefully and found a way of linking themes or images between the examples produced more coherent and effective answers.
- (b) This question did not present any difficulties. Candidates do not need to quote extensively from the poem but rather should spend time in showing awareness of poetic technique and demonstrate how the themes are explored and developed by the writer.

Concluding remarks

Centres are continuing to choose texts that appeal to their candidates and the enthusiasm is apparent. In order to maximise the effort spent in reading and preparing the texts, candidates would benefit from further guidance in interpreting questions and in essay-writing skills.

Resources

A selection of Example Candidate Responses together with revised and updated Schemes of Work are now available to download from the Teacher Support website <http://teachers.cie.org.uk>.

SPANISH

---

Paper 9719/42

Texts

Key messages

- Candidates should study the stylistic and thematic qualities of the text and not simply the storyline.
- Candidates must read the question carefully and respond to all aspects of their chosen question.
- Each answer must include specific references to the text, which are directly relevant to the question asked.
- References to the text must be correct, for example names of characters.
- Any background to the text must be accurate, for example the date the text was written.
- Option (a) questions in Sección Primera require more extensive treatment in part (iii), where candidates are expected to refer in detail to the work as a whole, not simply the printed extract.
- Candidates need to focus on essay-writing skills. It is expected that they can write an answer with a clear introduction and conclusion, and that the discussion includes relevant detailed material.

General comments

Examiners commented that the general standard of work was good; candidates had studied the texts carefully and presented answers legibly. However, greater focus on the question set and improved essay-writing skills would benefit a large number of candidates.

In some cases candidates did not clearly indicate which question they had chosen to answer and Centres are requested to remind candidates to write the question number, e.g. '2(b)', before they start their essay.

Comments on specific questions

Sección Primera

Question 1 Ernesto Sábato: El túnel

Option (a) was the most popular here. The majority of candidates noted that Allende passed the letter to Castel. The best answers examined the importance of "...me pertenecía" in detail, showing how Castel's possessive nature led to the death of María.

Option (b) was answered well by those candidates who had studied the symbolism of the names and how these related to the themes of the text.

Question 2 Pedro Calderón de la Barca: El alcalde de Zalamea

Marks awarded to answers to both options for this text were particularly dependent on close reading of the questions. Candidates must respond to all parts of the question; in many cases the focus was limited because candidates did not pay attention to the specific wording.

In option (a), most candidates picked out key parts of the extract to support their argument and answered parts (i) and (ii) thoroughly. Part (iii) required understanding of irony as a vehicle for the exploration of the themes. A significant number of essays dealt with the themes alone, or took it to mean criticism of the society portrayed.

Option (b) asked candidates to reflect on the importance of verisimilitude in the text and how this relates to the moral message of the theme. The best answers gave examples of Calderón's depiction of life at the time and the way the characters were made credible. This enhanced the themes, as the audience were able to identify with the individuals and gain greater understanding of the moral dilemmas. A description of themes alone did not constitute a full answer.

Question 3 Luis Sepúlveda: Un viejo que leía novelas de amor

Answers on this text were generally less detailed, with fewer specific references to support the discussion. This limited the marks available to those essays. It serves as an example of the way in which some candidates read the texts with too much focus on the story and less on the novel as a work of literature.

Option (a), parts (i) and (ii) were answered well. Part (iii) required candidates to respond to the ironic quotation and show how this is discussed in the text. There are many examples of both incidents and the attitude of individuals to support an answer. It needed to be made clear that candidates understood “el desierto” and the ecological message of the text.

The question in option (b) is often the first focus of discussion when studying this text. Many answers here reflected the points made earlier – little cohesion to the argument or awareness of the importance of the “novelas de amor” as a central element within the novel. Candidates needed to consider the novel as a construct, a work of the imagination, where every part has been included for a specific purpose, and analyse it accordingly.

Question 4 Lauro Olmo: La camisa

Option (a) was a popular question and resulted in sound essays. Candidates were able to discuss the different ways Olmo used alcohol and drunkenness within the text, both to inform the audience regarding the social issues and to underline many other themes.

In option (b), the wording of the question did not invite candidates to choose a theme and write about it. The focus was on “machismo”; candidates needed to analyse how this is presented in the play in the first instance and then, if they wished, go on to show how another theme may be considered central to the message of the text.

Sección Segunda

Question 5 Carmen Laforet: Nada

- (a) This was the least popular question on this text. There were a few very good answers, where candidates had clearly studied the historical background of the text and were able to show not only the physical deprivation of the time, but also the spiritual, emotional and personal aspects.
- (b) Many candidates chose this question, and generally answered well. There was much material to support the idea that Andrea’s time in Barcelona had been completely negative. The best essays included these references as well as a more considered analysis of what Andrea learned and how this informed her decision to leave.

Question 6 Laura Esquivel: Como agua para chocolate

- (a) A very large number of candidates answered this question. The factors that differentiated between responses were the level of detail and the sophistication of analysis. Many essays dealt with the development of the relationship between Tita and Mamá Elena chronologically, and analysed how their characters were revealed in key interactions and events. Some candidates ignored the important revelation of Mamá Elena’s lover. The majority of answers made some reference to “realmente” in the question, which suggests more than the normal response to grief.
- (b) This question also attracted many responses. Candidates showed detailed knowledge of the text and the best essays traced Nacha’s influence beyond her death, in pivotal incidents in Tita’s life. It was interesting to note that no reference was made to Nacha’s ethnic background.

Question 7 Federico García Lorca: Yerma

Almost all candidates chose to write on this text.

- (a) This was the most popular option. All candidates were able to discuss a number of characters and, at a simple level, state whether they were happy or not. Within a very wide range of answers, the best analysed degrees of happiness and changing situations for Juan, Yerma and some other characters. There was a lack of subtlety in assessing the nature of the relationship between Víctor and Yerma, and only a small number of essays considered why there was so much unhappiness.

- (b) Most essays focused on the closing scene, and there was limited evidence of critical analysis. A number of candidates stated that the final scene was the key one because the audience finds out what happens in the end. The best examples of this choice included the ability to trace elements presaging and leading to the denouement. A few very good answers chose a different scene and analysed interactions between characters in detail as well as explaining symbols found throughout the text. By examining their function in that scene and showing how the themes developed, candidates showed appreciation of the dramatist's skill.

Question 8 Alfonsina Storni: Selección de poemas

There were few responses to this text.

- (a) This question gave scope for a range of interpretations and choice of poems.
(b) Candidates who had prepared these poems thoroughly were able to give a convincing analysis.

Concluding remarks

Centres are continuing to choose texts that appeal to their candidates and the enthusiasm is apparent. In order to maximise the effort spent in reading and preparing the texts, candidates would benefit from further guidance in interpreting questions and in essay writing-skills.

Resources

A selection of Example Candidate Responses together with revised and updated Schemes of Work are now available to download from the Teacher Support website <http://teachers.cie.org.uk>.