The Copper Kettle

Sarah Browne has recently opened up The Copper Kettle, a coffee house, bakery and delicatessen at Main Street, Randalstown.

It has always been Sarah's dream to open up a coffee house as she had a lot of experience in this industry. For the past seven years she has been running a catering business from her home. Sarah has supplied a range of hot and cold dishes, breads, cakes and desserts for private functions and local events while building up a loyal clientele. Sarah's blueberry muffins are "the talk of the town"!

Sarah carried out substantial market research which indicated that there would be a strong demand for her new business idea. Randalstown had a number of fast food outlets and licensed restaurants but lacked a homely café where customers could enjoy a casual lunch or relax over a good cup of coffee. An extract from her business website states "At The Copper Kettle we keep things simple, wholesome and true. Everything is freshly made daily using the finest quality local ingredients".

Sarah's previous success allowed her to build up a sound reputation for her home cooked cuisine. Over the years, she had accumulated £20,000 in savings. This money was used to rent premises, purchase a number of assets including a cappuccino machine and a small vehicle. However, this initial investment was insufficient to meet all Sarah's financial needs and she was forced to examine other possible sources of finance.

Sarah is a strong supporter of Fairtrade products and uses every opportunity to promote these. She has established good relationships with local producers and sources her coffee from a well-known social enterprise. "The Copper Kettle uses creative cooking methods and features regional foods and locally grown ingredients".
