Pre-Release Material

A Spanish group, La Playa Golf Club has made a group reservation for 30 people in the Beeches Hotel and Country Club.

The booking for the golfing package is for three nights. Those attending the golf trip will share double rooms, and will pay La Playa Golf Club, prior to the trip. The Beeches Hotel and Country Club offer courtesy transport to and from the airport for their guests.

The group organiser Alfredo Caliva, has been in contact with the hotel and forwarded on guests' details to assist the check-in procedure. The hotel will pre-print the guests' registration cards. Each guest will be issued with a key card upon arrival.

Alfredo Caliva has requested a late check out for the guests as their flight is not until 7pm. The Beeches Hotel and Country Club will charge the guests an additional fee for this service.

The hotel offers foreign exchange facilities. This should assist golfers to pay for any additional services they might use in the hotel.

Alfredo Caliva has used the hotel for a number of golf trips and the manager has decided to upgrade his room to VIP status.

When dealing with a large group communication between all departments in the hotel and country club is vital for a successful trip.

Often guests leave items of personal property behind when they check out.

The Beeches Hotel and Country Club will be paid by Bank Transfer.

5 Hotel legislation states that all guests must complete a registration card.

When a hotel takes a group booking, it may pre-print the registration cards with the guest information received during the booking.

Explain two advantages of this practice for the hotel. (AO1, AO2)

- it speeds up the check-in process – less staff are required to check in a large group
- they can be printed well in advance – easing pressure on the front office staff during periods of high demand
- it ensures that there are not a large volume of guests at the check-in desk for a long period of time, this means that other guests staying or checking into the hotel can be seen quickly
- articles recovered from bedroom after guests departure can be traced back to guest and returned
- ensures hotel complies with legal requirements
- assists reception staff to identify guests in the event of an evacuation
- allows reception staff to identify what type of guest is occupying each room

12 The Beeches Hotel and Country Club have just introduced key cards.

Evaluate the use of key cards in hotels. (AO2, AO3)

Positive

- lightweight and easy to carry
- the card can be re-coded a number of times
- they can be coded to only allow access to certain areas
- they can be used to advertise the hotel with the use of the hotel name and logo on the front of the card and its paper envelope/case
- if you lose your card you can quickly get a replacement
- cheap and easy to replace if a guest takes it home or loses it
- cards can be programmed for the number of guests staying in a room
- can be used as a means of identification within the hotel.

Negative

- key cards like most credit cards are magnetically charged. If you put your key card against mobile phones, magnets, electronics, other credit cards, or anything of the like, they can become deactivated
  - expensive to install the equipment and to complete the change-over from manual keys
  - personal information is retained on the card and may lead to fraud
  - sometimes the cards are not encoded correctly and you can not gain entry to your room
  - easy to misplace or lose
  - if lost in the hotel, another guest could charge items to your room.
