illa scribentis capiti catenis insonabat. respicit rursus idem quod prius innuentem, nec moratus tollit lumen et sequitur. ibat illa lento gradu quasi gravis vinculis. postquam deflexit in aream domus, repente dilapsa deserit comitem. desertus herbas et folia concerpta signum loco ponit. postero die adit magistratus, monet ut illum locum effodi iubeant. inveniuntur ossa inserta catenis et implicita, quae corpus aevo terraque putrefactum nuda et exesa reliquerat vinculis;

It (the ghost) rattled its chains above the head of the man as he was writing. He looked round again at it beckoning in the same way as before, and with no delay he picked up his lamp and followed. It went with a slow step as if weighed down with the chains. After it turned away into the courtyard of the house, suddenly it vanished and deserted its companion. Having been deserted, he (Athenodorus) picked some plants and leaves and put them as a sign at the place. On the next day he approached the magistrates and advised them to order that place to be dug up. Bones were found, mixed up and entwined with chains, which the body, decomposed by time and the earth, had left bare and corroded by the chains;

his dictis perterritus temptare formam incipio. manu nasum prehendo: sequitur; aures pertracto: deruunt. ac dum turba directis digitis et nutibus me denotat, inter pedes circumstantium frigido sudore defluens effugio.
nec postea sic debilis ac sic ridiculus ad patriam redire potui, sed capillis hinc inde deiectis aurium vulnera celavi, nasi vero dedecus linteolo isto decenter obtexi.

Frightened by these words, I began to examine my appearance. I grasped my nose with my hand: it came off; I touched my ears: they fell off. And while the crowd was identifying me with pointed fingers and nods, among the feet of those standing around, dripping with a cold sweat, I escaped. And afterwards, so maimed and so ridiculous, I was not able to return to my native land, but I hid the wounds of my ears with hair grown long on both sides and indeed the humiliating condition of my nose, for decency's sake, I concealed with this patch.
