Snow Patrol Olympia, Dublin

TONY CLAYTON-LEA

They get a hard time of it, Snow Patrol, from certain quarters: primarily, that they lack the muscle and credibility of some bands and the saving grace of commercial mediocrity of others.

Yet they do in this venue — and, indeed, on their brief nationwide tour, which ends in Belfast next Wednesday — what few other multimillion selling acts of their status have the nerve to do: they mess around with their back catalogue, they wilfully reinvent their best-known songs and they do so with, apparently, little or no fear...
