The jellyfish is a strange creature. Its body looks like an inverted transparent bowl or bell. It has no nose or tongue but special cells all over its body that smell and taste. It has no eyes but light-sensitive organs around the side of its body that allow it to tell light from dark.

The jellyfish has touch receptors on its tentacles and around its mouth. ~~These receptors detect vibrations in the water caused by the movement of fish, crabs and other creatures swimming by that could be harmful to it.~~ 10
