Avevo iniziato la ricerca sulla guerra a partire dall'occupazione e dagli eccidi compiuti dalla Wehrmacht. Nei miei percorsi sul territorio, inseguendo le tracce delle violenze naziste, mi imbattei per la prima volta nei racconti dei grandi bombardamenti. Ovviamente ne avevo la conoscenza scientifica, ma non ero entrata mai nella dimensione reale dell'evento. A Capua ad esempio, mentre raccoglievo le testimonianze sulle uccisioni dei nazisti, una sessantina nella cittadina, venivo a scoprire che i bombardamenti avevano provocato in pochissimo tempo circa mille morti. Mi ero già trovata in una situazione analoga seguendo due tesi di laurea sui campi di internamento fascisti in Campania, a Solofra e a Campagna. Allora andavamo cercando le memorie dei campi, ci stupivamo che fossero pressoché assenti, che non fossero rimaste tracce dei luoghi di persecuzione. Poi, nel condurre la ricerca, venimmo a scoprire che sia a Solofra sia a Campagna si erano verificati due grandi bombardamenti, che avevano provocato centinaia di morti. Allora mi ero detta: che pretendiamo dalla gente? La memoria della guerra per loro è questa..

2. Translate into Italian (30 marks):*ANSWER THIS QUESTION IN A SEPARATE BOOK

In the beginning, before the Republic, Rome was ruled by kings. About one of these, a haughty tyrant by the name of Tarquin, an eerie tale was told. Once, in his palace, an old woman came calling on him. In her arms she carried nine books. When she offered these to Tarquin he laughed in her face, so fabulous was the price she was demanding. The old woman, making no attempt to bargain, turned and left without a word. She burned three of the books and then, reappearing before the King, offered him the remaining volumes, still at the same price as before. A second time, although with less self-assurance now, the King refused, and a second time the old woman left. By now Tarquin had grown nervous of what he might be turning down, and so when the mysterious crone reappeared, this time holding only three books, he hurriedly bought them, even though he had to pay the price originally demanded for all nine. Taking her money, the old woman then vanished, never to be seen again.

Who had she been? Her books proved to contain prophecies of such potency that the Romans soon realised that only one woman could possibly have been their author – the Sibyl. Yet this was an identification that only begged further questions, for the legends told of the Sibyl were strange and puzzling. On the presumption that she had foretold the Trojan War, men debated whether she was a compound of ten prophetesses, or immortal, or destined to live a thousand years.
